

ALBUQUERQUE EVENING HERALD

Opposite to Tribune Office
A REPUBLICAN NEWSPAPER,
BY THE HERALD PUBLISHING CO.

Published every afternoon except Sunday at 122-124 North Second street, Albuquerque, N. M.

Entered as second-class matter
March 7, 1911, at the post office at Albuquerque, N. M., under the Act of March 3, 1879.

One month by mail 50 cents
One month by carrier 60 cents
One year by mail $5.00
One year by carrier $6.00

Telephone 67.

CALL FOR REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

Whereas, pursuant to the provisions of the enabling act and the resolution admitting New Mexico into the Union, the governor of New Mexico has issued his proclamation ordering an election to be held on Tuesday, November 7, 1911, for the purpose of electing the various congressional, state, legislative, judicial and county officers authorized by the constitution heretofore adopted by the people of New Mexico;

Now, therefore, pursuant to and in accordance with resolutions adopted by the Republican central committee of New Mexico in convention assembled at Santa Fe, N. M., on Tuesday, September 5, 1911, it is hereby issued for the purpose of calling the first Republican state convention in the city of Las Vegas, N. M., at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of Thursday, the 28th day of September, A. D. 1911, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the various congressional and state offices created and authorized by law and the Republican central committees of the various counties of the new state, except as otherwise by this committee ordered, are requested to issue calls for the holding upon such notice and date as they may deem expedient, county conventions for the purpose of electing delegates to said state convention, at which the basis of representation shall be 1 delegate for each 10% or fraction thereof of 5% or more of the votes cast for the Republican candidate for delegate to congress at the election of 1908; and 1 delegate at large from each county now in existence upon which basis the representation at said state convention from the several counties of New Mexico shall be as follows:

Delegates.

Bernalillo County	25
Chaves	—
Cerro	—
Dona Ana	14
Eddy	4
Grant	19
Guadalupe	11
Lincoln	2
Luna	—
McKinley	5
Mora	15
Otero	7
Quay	11
Rio Arriba	16
Roosevelt	1
Sandoval	16
San Juan	2
San Miguel	2
Santa Fe	17
Sherman	5
Socorro	17
Taos	13
Torrance	8
Union	14
Ventura	15

Total 152

It is recommended that in event the same delegates are not elected delegates to the judicial and legislative district conventions that the same basis be used in the election of such district delegates and that such conventions shall be called and held after the state convention, at such time and place as may be agreed upon by the chairmen of the central committees of the several counties composing the respective districts mentioned, or in default of agreement by said chairmen, by a majority of the delegates elected to such district convention.

It is further recommended that the Republican county conventions in and for the several counties, for the nomination of county officers, be held after the state convention.

H. O. BURSTIN,
Chairman.

Secretary.

ABOUT PAVING.

There is no question that Albuquerque has reached a point in her career where it is high time to pave her streets in the business section, at least.

We ran along for years with an inadequate sewer system and we finally set about building a new one when we absolutely had to have it. We are at about that stage of the game with regard to our streets.

The present city council made somewhat of a brilliant fizz in building the sewer. It cost considerably more than it ought to have cost, to say nothing of whether it will work now that it is finished.

Therefore the council can not consider the people for cherishing considerable doubt as to the council's ability to pave the streets of the city and do it economically and wisely.

The manner in which the paving movement has been handled to date is enough to give the taxpayerague a chuckle.

In the first place, it is hard to get at the logic behind the aldermen's action in turning down the O'Laughlin bid of $1.80 and considering a bid of $2.10 as a substitute.

After listening closely to all explanations of the subject it still seems apparent that paving should not cost so much.

Alderman Clark, who brought up the question of using wood blocks for paving touches on a proposition that deserves more consideration than the aldermen have given it as yet.

If we can use wood blocks as cheaply as other material, keep our money at home and at the same time get an excellent and noiseless paving of stone on the floor of the room to do.

We have some big industries here that would benefit by the use of wood blocks, and if those industries could furnish this material as charcoal to foreign concerns we could get foreign imports or other paving than we might to have the name before them.

But the thing that the city ought to do is to take up the question of paving in a businesslike way.

Something is done as yet, but we might to have the name before them.

It will not be necessary to send any marketing messages to look at paving elsewhere. There are plenty of manufacturers on paving and their reports are available to us and all.

There are likewise several good kinds of paving, any one of which would doubtless transfer our streets and alleys into quietness throughout the city. It is proper to hold that that is about all we care about. There is a certain amount of paving necessary on all paving that it can certainly be obtained from other cities having like conditions to our own while paying less the rest.

Then the question of getting the paving for the least money is a matter that any business man would attend to. If the council has any money ability it certainly has advantages to bids to proper manner, see to it that a bidding is not made among the bidders to hold up the city, and in the light of its experience with Glass & Fischer, it can be arranged to have the city will get what it pays for.

This is all there is to the paving proposition in Albuquerque. The people are in favor of paving certain streets in the business section, and the only promise they attach to the deal is that they shall get what they pay for and that they shall not be made to pay two or three times what the job is worth.

In plain English, the city council must get down to business and do its work on a business basis if it expects to do any paving.

NOT A SQUARE DEAL.

Cloris came before the Democratic state committee yesterday with a delegation asking that the state convention be held in that city.

Being a Republican paper it is none of our affair, but from the standpoint of fair play Cloris has our sympathy. Albuquerque has failed to get either the insurgents or progressive wing of the party whose votes his friends in congress charged were too often cast with the Democrats to help them put the president in a hole.

The most important measure with respect to the future of individual politicians and the conduct of the campaign next year that was passed at the extra session was beyond question the campaign publicity bill. Under its disastrous provisions, campaign funds will likely be the smallest in a quarter of a century. This was a reformation in which both parties and all factions joined. It will be seen how far an appeal to reason backed by a medium of cash will go with the voters. The big campaign contributors and the officeholders who have to "come across" with their quotas in this past will be glad to keep their money in their pockets.

The forthcoming convention of the National Rivers and Harbors congress, which will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during the first week of December gives promise of bringing together a large number of distinguished men who have characterized any of its predecessors. Among those who have already accepted the invitation of President Joseph E. Ransdell to deliver addresses are Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey, Brig. Gen'l W. H. Bishop, chief of U. S. Engineers; Chairman Stephen M. Sparkman, chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors of the house, and the presidents of the leading waterways associations throughout the United States. While the National Rivers and Harbors congress will be held in the city of Washington during